

I received notification from the attorney generals office in Indiana the Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) has chosen to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in a proceeding before the Federal Communications Commission. I want to make you aware that I do not wish any of these businesses to contact me. The calls that are being stopped by this law are the UNDESIRABLE, annoying constant telemarketing calls. This law has significantly changed my day.

My cell phone has even been used for these junk calls. This costs me 35 cents a minute.

As a busy mother of 2-year-old twins, and the daughter of an ill mother, I value the urgency that a phone call NOW brings. If this law were to be changed, I would get so many calls that my family time would be in jeopardy. I would have to choose to take time away from my children for the benefit to banks, or disregard the potential call for help from my mother or another family member.

This law is very important to the well being of families in Indiana. These businesses can still contact us via mail; and they do. Everyday we get at least 5 pieces of junk mail from a bank! I dread the thought of them being able to use the phone to inflict their message.
